Visitors of Terme Dobrna, the oldest thermal spa in Slovenia, have been enjoying the healing waters since 1403. The thermal springs, originating from a depth of 1,200 metres, offer a seamless link between ancient healing traditions and modern relaxation.

From the hills of Pohorje rises the poetic voice of Skomarje House in Skomarje, a tribute to the poet Jurij Vodovnik. In this wooden house, visitors can feel the harmony between the land and poetry, where history is preserved in the quiet simplicity of rural life.

Meanwhile, Oplotnica Manor tells a story of change and resilience. Once a monastic office, later a residence and school, the manor house has been transformed over the centuries, reflecting the resilience and adaptability of the area over time.

In the centre of Šentjur stands the Ipavec House, dedicated to the renowned Ipavec family of composers, doctors, and patriots, whose legacy shaped Slovenian culture and European music, which left an indelible mark on history.

From spring to autumn, the places between Pohorje and Bohor come alive with a diverse programme of traditional events, linking cultural heritage, local traditions and modern creativity, attracting visitors from near and far.

Masters of Tradition and Art

In the authentic places of Kozjansko, Konjiško, and the surrounding area, individuals are dedicated to preserving traditional crafts, thus linking the past with the present.

In Dobrna, Peter Habe collects antiques at the Blažiš homestead, including motorbikes, bicycles, swords, and military and fire-fighting equipment. His collection includes the remains of a plane that crashed in Socka during World War II. His collection also includes ethnological artefacts and postcards of Dobrna, which testify to the past of the town.

The Planko couple cherish their love of old folk customs and pass on their craftsmanship to the younger generations. In the months when the snow whitens the hilly landscape of Dobje, Angela and Jožef weave baskets of all sizes from carefully selected withy, “tie” pots and make pretty flowers from crepe paper in their favourite room, the living room with a wood-burning stove, at their homestead.

Marjan Crnič from Oplotnica, a great admirer of Pohorje stone, is dedicated to creating useful and aesthetic products that carry top quality certificates. He is particularly fond of Pohorje marble and Pohorje elm, which are used mainly as roofing and flooring materials, and he transforms these natural riches into a wide variety of artistic and functional products that captivate with their beauty and durability.

For more than forty years Štefan Kalšek from Slovenske Konjice has been making wickerwork made of willow, which is typical of the Dravinja Valley. Visit his workshop and discover the process of making wickerwork products, including baskets of various sizes and shapes, trays, braided bottles, salt cellars and other decorative items.

Surrounded by nature, next to a bubbling brook, stands the restored homestead of Marija Gračnar from Šentjur, with a water-powered mill more than 200 years old, where Marija adds a new chapter on pottery to the story of ancient milling techniques.

Not far from the village of Vitanje, Pavel Skaza handcrafts and repairs violins in his luthier's studio, reviving the tradition of musical craftsmanship. His violins, based on models by famous Italian masters, are meticulously crafted by hand.

From music to art, from the valley to the picturesque Pohorje, where the Skumavec Art Days are held every summer at Resnik. Each year, this art colony brings together artists to create unique works in an inspiring environment. The resulting artworks are then on display year-round in Slovenia's highest gallery, which attracts art lovers from near and far with its rich collection.
